1. In view of the information supplied in reference on Air Reception Caches, we assume the beacons we now have in the ground are still operational and, providing they are packed well enough to prevent moisture deterioration, could be used by our agents in wartime. Later, after the present 1959-1960 caching program is completed, they can be replaced with the recommended NAW 220. 2. We plan, as suggested in reference, to recover the ABE buried on GIBALD's property to prevent any unauthorized recovery (though this is unlikely). But, because this cache was buried under almost ideal conditions (under the floor of an outbuilding), we don't believe its present condition will be a good indication of how the other units buried in forests have fared. An examination of the way it was packed might give an indication of whether the other units are still serviceable.
